

Cops place ad in hunt for killer

both cars around 11:45 p.m. Aug. 14, troopers said, but the motorist was unable to describe the cars. No murder weapon has been found, Warren said, and he declined to say whether O'Connell's clothing has been recovered. A search of the cornfield on Monday failed to yield any new evidence, he said.

Police said they believe O'Connell was attacked near the spot where her body was found. An autopsy revealed no evidence of sexual assault, police said. Troop E Commander Maj. Richard Tonzi said he hopes the advertisement, which reached thousands of people through free distribution in south Seneca County Wednesday, will yield more clues. "It's generated several calls already," Tonzi said. "Most of the callers say they doubt what they say has anything to do with it, but... we take it all and try to piece it together." Police are also reviewing other violent crimes in the immediate area and beyond, looking for specific methods of operation. Recently arrested suspects in other violent crimes are also being investigated, Tonzi said, including a

New Jersey man arrested Aug. 18 and accused of raping an Ithaca woman. "He (the suspect in the Ithaca rape) is not a suspect (in O'Connell's murder) yet, and we have nothing connecting him with the murder in Ovid. But we're checking him out," Tonzi said. "We've had between 220 and 230 leads of various types and I've assigned several investigators to the case," Tonzi said. "We have no one we'd term a suspect at this point." O'Connell arrived in Ovid Aug. 12 to visit James Vermeersch, 18, who lives in a trailer on County Route 139. All information gathered about O'Connell's death is being fed into a computer, Tonzi said, in keeping with a state police practice established during "22-caliber" murders in September 1980 in Buffalo.

Son dead, FBI to blame, mother believes

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The FBI's release of information about a man claiming to know details of the abduction of a newspaper carrier may have led kidnappers to kill the youth, the boy's mother fears. "In my heart, I feel that the FBI has been responsible for his death," Noreen Gosch said of her son in a telephone interview Wednesday. "As far as I'm concerned, I think the FBI has killed Johnny Gosch with their negligence." FBI agents in West Des Moines and regional offices in Omaha, Neb., said they would not comment on Mrs. Gosch's allegations. Johnny, then 12, vanished Sept.

5, 1982, while on his paper route. Mrs. Gosch and her husband, John, were angered when the FBI issued a news release Aug. 13 saying it sought Robert H. Meier II, 19, of Saginaw, Mich., in connection with an attempt to defraud the Gosches out of $11,000. Meier allegedly wrote a letter to the Gosches in July claiming he knew the whereabouts of their son, and that for a fee he could arrange Johnny's return. He has been charged with six counts of wire fraud. He surrendered to the FBI in Buffalo, N.Y., earlier this month. On Wednesday a federal magistrate ruled that surety put up by relatives was insufficient to meet a $50,000 bond to free Meier and ordered him returned to Iowa by next week. "The FBI doesn't ordinarily put out press releases," Mrs. Gosch said. "I definitely feel their actions have killed our son." A short time after the FBI's news release, the Gosches released copies of the letter they said they received from Meier. Mrs. Gosch denied Wednesday that their action also jeopardized her son. Earlier Wednesday, Mrs. Gosch said she was pleased with the decision to keep Meier in custody because she and her husband felt Meier had information about their son's whereabouts.
